

MARK TOTH, MARTIAL ARTS CV

BACKGROUND

Mark Toth began learning traditional-style Japanese martial arts at Futen Dojo (Milwaukee, WI) in 1993. In 2002, at the request of his teacher, Michael Coleman Shihan, Mr. Toth began to assume a leadership role when he created a club system (“Kobudo Club”) to promote Genbukan martial arts at Wisconsin universities. The first club was registered at Marquette University. The following year (2003), Grandmaster Tanemura awarded Mr. Toth the organizational title, Group Leader. By 2004, clubs were operating at three Wisconsin universities and in 2005, Mr. Toth was recognized as a dojocho (School Chief/Director). For the next several years, Mr. Toth taught weekly martial arts classes at Marquette University, with occasional seminars at other Wisconsin universities.

Today, Mr. Toth operates a traditional school, Unryu Dojo, on his property in south-eastern Pennsylvania. He welcomes adults of any age or ability to join him on the Old Martial Way – a journey of self-discovery and continuous improvement guided by traditional bushi values and discipline.
